Chairman Ashbel P. Davenport says also in the letter that he will wait at his office on the fifth floor of the who cleans out Mayor Grant's office, and she Federal Building, for the Committee's Sergeant-at-Arms in order to give the .Committee a chance to subpossa him, but that he Mrs. Dotas said this morning that she fin-must even then say "Na;, nay" to the Com-paign of his life, as he would be if he attended on the Committee; but in derring the Committees mandate he places himself in contempt of the House of Representatives.

But the House of Representatives.
But the House Committee, he thinks, is powerless to punish him, and President Harrison would not be likely to call a special session of Congress before election for the purpose of punishing him.

"I shall not obey the Fitch Committee's subpens," said John I., grimly, this morning, shoving alla hands deep into his trousers pockets. "I can't; I'm altogother too busy."

"But that's in contempt of the House of Representatives!" exclaimed an Evening World report only rolled up his forbidding eyes under his heavy, beetling brows.

"The House, though, is the only power that can punish you for contempt?" suggested the reporter.

"Well, hardly," rejoined the iron-visaged Chief Supervisor, suggestively, Congressman Fitch says: "I have personally never been of the opinion that Mr. Davenoert would consent to go on the witness stand and submit to an examination in regard to what he did in the election of 1888, the sums of money which he collected, partly from the Government and partly from the Republican National Committee and from other Republican Sources; and the work which he is doing now for the party with the machinery furnished him at the expense of the general public. He will take almost any chance first.

"His main difficulty is an examination into the financial side of his operation.
"Since Mr. Harrison's election he has managed to collect at the Treasury Bepartment for alloyed services. For which he did not dare to attempt to collect a doiler during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration, the great sum of $98,178.48.

"This was in addition to his compensation as a United States Commissioner and also in addition to very large sums received by him from his party associates.

"It is generally believed," added Congressman Fitch, "that he received in one payment alone from the Republican National Committee in 1888 the sum of $50,000. To explain what he did with this money—how much of it he spent and what for, and how much he kept and why—would be so unpleasant that distinct the final term of the forgistative body which created his office rather than endure it.

"Another difficulty which will prevent his going on the stand to answer questions, is his inability; show any reason, except a desire to intimidate Democrats, for the numerous arrests which he has made.

"Acting first in his capacity as the head of a partisan detective bureau, he has sought information against thousands of citizens for alleged offenses against the election laws; then acting in his capacity of United States Supervisor of Elections he has obtained warrants for the arrest of these persons; then acting in his capacity as United States Commissioner, sitting as a magistrate, he has heard his own charges against these people presented to himself as Judge, by himself as prosecuting attorney, and has declared them all not guifty and discharged them—when it was too late for them to vote!
